Lee Evans Planning's consultant's proposals for Archway, London, feature in Urban Design Directory 06/05/09

Consultant Nathan Anthony's work in Urban Design has recently been selected to feature in the prestigious Urban Design Directory.

The ambitious project, part of Nathan's coursework at Southbank University, outlines proposals for the redevelopment of Archway London, a complex urban form, and involved in depth analysis of the local urban environment and existing infrastructure.

During this process realistic goals for the area, based on plausible commercial and government involvement, informed by the views of the immediate population, were identified.

Nathan has since successfully completed his MA in Planning Policy & Practice at Southbank University and is currently working towards MRTPI status.
